b. The head of the family has basic responsibility for preparing for the welfare and safety of the family in time of emergency. The decision with respect to moving his family from the Washington area in time of emergency rests with the employee; in making the decision he must abide by Federal or state directives which may impose controls or prohibitions on such movement during different phases of emergency. Nevertheless it is expected that the employee who is en route to a relocation center may make last-minute arrangements for the safety and welfare of his family when leaving the Washington area. It is further expected that these arrangements may include launching the family's movement from the area if such is desired by the employee and if the movement is permitted by authorities.

c. Examples of employees' assistance in the movement of their families from the Washington area are as follows:

(1) If an employee has been directed to proceed to a relocation center under emergency conditions but before there is any general evacuation of the Washington area, and if he elects to start the immediate movement of his family toward a distant point, he may do so and may accompany them for a short distance before leaving them to report to the relocation center.

(2) If a general evacuation of the Washington area is taking place, or if an attack has occurred and travel is permitted, the employee may launch the movement of his family as

d. An employee's plans with respect to moving his dependents from the area will be fully consonant with OTR plans for the car sharing which will ensure the transportation of all members of the OTR relocation and reinforcement groups to the relocation center. An exception will be the action taken if the Washington area is actually subjected to enemy attack; at such time and afterwards the employee will give first attention to his family, if in the area, and each employee will arrange his own travel to the relocation center.

e. It is urged that each family select a definite rendezvous point, such as the home of a relative at a distance from the Washington area, which would be the ultimate objective of members of the family if departure from this area is to occur. Planning along these lines should be discussed thoroughly with members of the family. Family plans for action if the family is separated at the time of attack or evacuation may also include an initial rendezvous

In addition, the employee may entrust to a responsible member of his family a sealed message which is to be opened upon the occurrence of a state of emergency, and which advises the family members that they can write to the employee by name
